CONCEPT NOTE

India's journey toward development is as diverse as its geography, culture, and traditions. While the country has made significant strides in economic growth, education, healthcare, and infrastructure, regional disparities persist, posing challenges to inclusive and sustainable development. The interplay between policy frameworks and resource allocation is pivotal in bridging these gaps and ensuring equitable progress across all regions. This conference explores these critical dimensions, focusing on Uttar Pradesh (North India) and West Bengal (East India)—two states with distinct socio-economic landscapes. By examining these regions, the event aims to illuminate how tailored policy initiatives and efficient resource management can foster balanced growth and sustainable development.
